

Mercer Law Review

Volume 73
Number 3 Alumni Edition

Article 4

4-2022

Editor's Note

D. Garrett White

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.law.mercer.edu/jour_mlr

Recommended Citation

White, D. Garrett (2022) "Editor's Note," Mercer Law Review. Vol. 73: No. 3, Article 4.
Available at: https://digitalcommons.law.mercer.edu/jour_mlr/vol73/iss3/4

This Front Matter is brought to you for free and open access by the Journals at Mercer Law School Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Mercer Law Review by an authorized editor of Mercer Law School Digital Commons. For more information, please contact repository@law.mercer.edu.

EDITOR'S NOTE

Historically, the Articles Edition had a theme based on the editor's interests. During the Summer of 2021, per tradition, we sought to develop a theme and solicit authors based on that theme. After much deliberation, myself and Editor-In-Chief, Shreya Shah, decided to go a different direction with the Volume 73 Articles Edition.

One of the goals for the Volume 73 Board of Editors was to reconnect with Mercer Law Review alumni with hopes of creating the first Mercer Law Review Alumni Council. I am proud to say that as of the publication of this Edition, the Alumni Council is off the ground and in its infancy. With the Alumni Council in mind, we decided to tap into the wealth of legal knowledge of the Mercer Law Review alumni network. We sent out an "all-call," inviting each Law Review alumnus for which we had contact information—dating back five decades—to contribute to this Edition.

We encountered immediate interest and were overwhelmed with the response by our alumni. You will find articles in this Edition authored by judges, educators, public interest, government, and private firm lawyers. The "theme," so to speak, is that each article was written by at least one graduate of Mercer Law School who was a member of Mercer Law Review. These alumni-authors have written on a variety of topics that will be a shining contribution to each area of law discussed. Also included are four student publications. The inclusion of the student publications highlights the work of our members and provides readers a peek into the future of the brilliant students that make up the Law Review.

Overall, this Edition is meant to highlight our alumni and show readers how valuable an asset Mercer Law Review is to the practice of law. Perhaps future editorial boards will continue this practice in what could become the Alumni Edition. I sincerely hope you enjoy reading this, the Articles Edition, Volume 73 of the Mercer Law Review.

D. Garrett White,*
Articles Editor, Volume 73

*My sincerest thanks to Editor-in-Chief, Shreya Shah, and the entire Board of Editors for their hard work on this Volume. Thank you to each author and member of Mercer Law Review. Finally, I thank my wife Brooke—another brilliant lawyer. Had it not been for your encouragement and guidance, I would have never gone to law school, let alone served on the Board of Editors of the Mercer Law Review.