MERCER UNIVERSITY SCHOOL OF LAW

GENERAL INFORMATION. Mercer University School of Law is located in Macon, Georgia, 80 miles south of Atlanta. Mercer Law School has been graduating practice-ready lawyers who uphold the highest ideals of the legal profession since 1873. Our distinguishing attributes include the deliberate choice to be smaller, the innovative curriculum that focuses on preparing students for practice, the excellent and accessible faculty and staff, and the close-knit culture that makes learning enjoyable and success attainable.

DEGREES AWARDED. The study of law at Mercer University School of Law consists of a three-year program directed toward the J.D. degree. A joint J.D.-M.B.A. program is offered in conjunction with Mercer's Stetson School of Business and Economics. In addition, the law school offers a Business Certificate Program and a Legal Writing Certificate Program. Please see our website for more details at <https://law.mercer.edu>.

ADMISSIONS. As a top provider of legal education, Mercer Law School is selective in admissions. Our process aims to select from the applicant pool students who will contribute to our academic community during their three years of legal education and, ultimately, to society and the legal profession. At Mercer Law School, we consider many factors in evaluating an applicant's potential both in law school and for becoming a competent and ethical attorney. Some of these factors include a LSAT score, undergraduate GPA, grade trends, letters of recommendation, personal statement, employment history, undergraduate course of study, community and military service, advanced degrees, leadership ability, personal hardships, and other relevant background information. Persons interested in applying for admission to the Mercer University School of Law may access information at www.law.mercer.edu or email the Admissions Office at admissions@law.mercer.edu.

LAW LIBRARY. The Furman Smith Law Library has a staff of ten, including five professional librarians. The librarians provide extensive instruction in both print and electronic research as part of the curriculum. The library's collection includes over 350,000 volumes in books and microforms as well as a wide array of legal and non-legal electronic resources. Carrels, tables, soft seating, "smart" study rooms and a technology lounge are available to law students. Throughout the library and law school, students have wireless access to the library and law school network via their personal laptops. The library's web site features an extensive collection of annotated links to Georgia and federal legal research materials. For more information about the library visit <https://law.mercer.edu/library/>.

CAREER SERVICES OFFICE. Employers who are interested in interviewing students and graduates of the Mercer University School of Law are invited to contact the Career Services Office. Upon request, the Career Services Office will be happy to forward resumes, arrange on-campus interviews, or assist employers in any other way. Employers may contact the Career Services Office at (478)301-2615, via email at careerservices@law.mercer.edu, or post a job directly from our website at <https://law.mercer.edu/career/employers/>.
